Monument to a vibrant early people of Arizona

Pueblo cave dwellers taught Navajos to farm

SPECIAL TO THE WASHINGTON TIMES

SQUINT just a little against the noonday sun, and you can see them riding through the valley between the orange-red sandstone buttes thrusting up toward the bright sky: the 7th Cavalry in hot pursuit of Apache warriors and the ghost of John Ford, standing tall. Monument Valley has been the scene of countless movies, and it is small wonder that the beautiful, moonlike landscape has attracted filmmakers for decades. It's wild, lonely, silent and indescribably beautiful.

The actual name of the val-

“Ten of us travel in two supercomfortable vans of the Detours Company. Our drivers are superb chauffeurs and guides, never forgetting to replenish the water supply on board, relief from the...Arizona sun.”

TRANSPORTATION DETOURS:

The company will organize tours in its comfortable vans all over Arizona; its drivers are well-informed, competent and pleasant as tour guides and chauffeurs. Highly recommended.
